How Stands the Case.

When loyal men point to the monstrous usurpation of the President in dictating the terms on which Southern men shall come into Congress, the copperheads falsely report that he is following in the footsteps of Mr. Lincoln. The truth is, Mr. Lincoln never dreamed of the despotic doctrines of restoring the Southern States, save with the advice and consent of Congress. Here is what Mr. Lincoln said in his amnesty proclamation of December 5

"To avoid misunderstanding," "it may be proper to further say that whether members sent to Congress from any (insurgent) States shall be admitted to seats constitutionally rest exclusively with the respective Houses, and not to any extent with the Executive.'

But more than this: The last public speech Mr. Lincoln ever uttered-three days before his assassination, and when he expected to be called upon to set in this matter-referring to the Government he set up in Louisiana, he said :

" And I also in the proclamation distinctly protested that the Executive claimed no right to say when or whether members should be admitted to seats i Congress from such States. This plan was in advance submitted to the then Cabinet, and as distinctly approved by every member of it. One of them (Seward) suggested that I should omit the protest gainst my own power in regard to the admission of members of Congress, from the rebel States."

These extracts will settle the question as to Mr. Lincoln. Mr. Johnson's instructions to Governor Sharkey and Governor Marvin, teach the same doctrine, a doctrine he now proposes to ignore, in order to get the rebels of the South into Congress. This hast quoted extract shows where Johnson got the ides that he has power to admit-namely, from Scsard. This purpose to interfere with the prerogatives of Congress was an after thought with Johnson, and became a part of the new Democratic programme at Seward's suggestion. He is the main hand that moves the Administration, and inspires it with courage and daring to protect rebels, and subvert the work for which a quarter of a million of Union soldiers bled and died!

Johnson at Willard's Hotel.

While Vice President, and just after the fall of Richmond, the Presiden t made a big speech, and revised the report of it himself. He said :

We are now, my friends, winding up a rebellion great effort that has been made by bad men to overthrow the Government of the United States—a Government founded upon free principles and cemented by the best blood of the Revolution.-[Cheers.] You must indulge me in making one single remark in regard to myself. At the time that the traitors in the Senate of the United States plotted against the Government and entered into a conspiracy more foul, more execrable, and more odious than that of Cataline against the Romans, I happened to be a member of that body, and, as to loyalty, stood solitary and alone among the Senators from the Southern States. I was then and there called upon to know what I would do with such traitors, and I want to repeat my reply here. I said, if we had an Andrew Jackson, he would hang them as high as Haman, Icheers, but as he is no more, and sleeps in his grave in his own beloved State, where traitors and reason have even insulted his tomb, and the very earth that covers his remains, humble as I am, when you ask me what I would do, my reply is, I would arrest them; I would try them; I would convict them, and I would hang them. [Prolonged cheers.]

Thus opened the Vice President, and thus he

One word more and I have done. It is this: I am in favor of leniency. But, in my opinion, evildoers should be punished. [Cries of "That's so." Treason is the highest crime known in the catalogue of crimes, and for him that is guilty of it-for him that is willing to lift his impious hand against the authority of the nation-I would say, death is too easy a punishment. [Loud cheers.] My notion is that treason must be made odious, that traitors must be punished and impoverished, their social power broken, though they must be made to feel the penalty of their crime. You, my friends, have traitors in your very midst, and treason needs rebuke and punishment here as well as elsewhere.

The President has left this platform. We were on it then-we are on it yet, and on it we intend to

The Johnson Club.

The Johnson Club.

The long roll of officers of the Johnson Club recently organized at Washington, was remarkable for having the name of only one Republican in it; that of Ex-Governor Todd, of Ohio. The appearance of his name occasioned much surprise and comment at the time, and he now has authorized his friends to say that the use of his name as one of the Vice Presidents of the Johnson National Union Club, so-called, was without his authority or consent, and that he gave no authority or license the state of the Johnson Pations of the Johnson Pations of the Johnson National Union Club, so-called, was without his authority or license the state of the gave no authority or license of the Johnson Pations o consent, and that he gave no authority or license whatever to any one for using his name as Vice President or otherwise of any Johnson Club or meeting; and further, that he has no sympathy for any organization of rebels, copperheads or men of doubtful political character and disturbers of the harmony of our country.-Nashville Press and Times.
